“It has been a privilege to meet such stellar individuals from all over our great state, people who have made the huge commitment of time and effort to run for public office,” said Julaine Appling, Director of the WFA PAC. “These are ordinary people—businessmen and women, community leaders, husbands, wives, mothers and fathers. Many are seeking public office for the first time; some are seeking re-election. But WFA PAC is confident they are all wanting to make a difference by standing strong for traditional marriage and family, the sanctity of human life, limited government, and fiscal responsibility.

“We are grateful for these men and women who are willing to stand in the gap for us and represent our families, our values and our rights in Wisconsin government. We wish each of them the best as they campaign this fall and encourage citizens to support them and their campaigns.”
